About the Author

Lucy Maud Montgomery was born in Clifton, Prince Edward Island, in 1874. She was the youngest of several children, and she spent her childhood in a small farmhouse in Cavendish. Montgomery was a bright and imaginative child, and she began writing at a young age. She published her first poem when she was nine years old, and she continued to write throughout her life.

Montgomery is best known for her series of novels about Anne Shirley, a young orphan girl who is adopted by a brother and sister in Avonlea, Prince Edward Island. The first Anne book, Anne of Green Gables, was published in 1908, and it was an immediate success. Montgomery wrote a total of eight Anne books, and they have been translated into more than 30 languages.

Montgomery also wrote a number of other novels, short stories, and poems. Her work is characterized by its strong female characters, its beautiful descriptions of nature, and its heartwarming themes. Montgomery died in Toronto in 1942, but her work continues to be loved by readers around the world.
