Gilad Sharon is one of the world's leading naturalists. He has spent his life studying and photographing the natural world, and his work has been featured in numerous books, magazines, and exhibitions. Sharon is also a passionate advocate for conservation, and he has worked tirelessly to protect the environment.

Early Life and Education

Gilad Sharon was born in Jerusalem, Israel, in 1956. He developed a love of nature at a young age, and he spent much of his childhood exploring the countryside around his home. Sharon attended the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, where he studied biology and environmental science. After graduating, he worked as a field biologist for the Israel Nature and Parks Authority.

Photography Career

Sharon began his photography career in the early 1980s. He quickly gained a reputation for his stunning images of the natural world. Sharon's photographs have been featured in numerous books, magazines, and exhibitions. He has also published several books of his own, including "The Land of Israel: A Photographic Journey" (1998) and "The Great Rift Valley: A Journey Through Time and Nature" (2006).

Conservation Work

Sharon is a passionate advocate for conservation. He has worked tirelessly to protect the environment, both in Israel and around the world. Sharon is a founding member of the Society for the Protection of Nature in Israel (SPNI), and he has served on the board of directors for many years. He has also worked with the World Wildlife Fund (WWF) and the United Nations Environment Programme (UNEP).

Awards and Recognition

Sharon has received numerous awards for his work. In 2006, he was awarded the prestigious Israel Prize, the country's highest honor for achievement in the arts, sciences, and humanities. Sharon has also been awarded the WWF's Gold Medal, the UNEP's Global 500 Award, and the World Wildlife Fund's Conservation Hero Award.

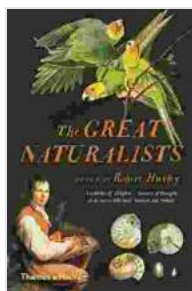

Legacy

Gilad Sharon is one of the world's leading naturalists. His work has helped to raise awareness of the importance of conservation, and he has inspired countless people to appreciate the beauty of the natural world. Sharon's legacy will continue to inspire generations to come.
