The Cultural Revolution was a tumultuous period in Chinese history that lasted from 1966 to 1976. It was a time of great political and social upheaval, as the country was gripped by a wave of revolutionary fervor. The Red Guards, a group of young people who were loyal to Chairman Mao Zedong, played a major role in the Cultural Revolution. They carried out a campaign of terror against anyone who was seen as a threat to the revolution, including intellectuals, teachers, and government officials.

The Little Red Guard Family Memoir is a firsthand account of the Cultural Revolution from the perspective of a young girl who witnessed the horrors firsthand. The author, Dai Qing, was just 14 years old when the Cultural Revolution began. Her father was a high-ranking official in the Chinese Communist Party, and her family was targeted by the Red Guards. Dai Qing and her family were forced to live in hiding for several years, and they witnessed the persecution of their friends and neighbors.

A Personal Narrative of the Cultural Revolution

The Little Red Guard Family Memoir is a powerful and moving account of the Cultural Revolution. Dai Qing writes with honesty and clarity about the horrors that she witnessed, and she does not shy away from the difficult questions that the Cultural Revolution raises.
