The Little Rock Nine

The Little Rock Nine were a group of nine African American students who were selected to integrate Central High School in 1957. They were: Ernest Green, Elizabeth Eckford, Jefferson Thomas, Terrence Roberts, Carlotta

Walls LaNier, Minnijean Brown Trickey, Gloria Ray Karlmark, Thelma Mothershed Wair, and Melba Pattillo Beals.

The students were all academically gifted, and they were eager to attend Central High School. However, their presence at the school was met with fierce resistance from the white community. The students were harassed and threatened, and they were even attacked by a mob of angry white protesters.

Despite the challenges they faced, the Little Rock Nine persevered. They attended their classes, and they refused to be intimidated by the threats and violence. Their courage and determination helped to break down the barriers of segregation, and they made it possible for other African American students to attend previously all-white schools.

Elizabeth Eckford

Elizabeth Eckford was one of the most well-known members of the Little Rock Nine. She was the only student who was not accompanied by a National Guardsman when she went to Central High School on September 4, 1957. She was met by a mob of angry white protesters, and she was spat on and threatened. Despite the fear she felt, Eckford stood her ground, and she refused to be turned away.

Eckford's story is a powerful example of the courage and determination that the Little Rock Nine showed in the face of adversity. She is a role model for all who stand up for what they believe in, and her story continues to inspire people around the world.

The Legacy of the Little Rock Nine

The Little Rock Nine made a lasting impression on American history. Their courage and determination helped to break down the barriers of segregation, and they paved the way for the Civil Rights Movement. Their story is still relevant today, and it continues to inspire people to fight for equality and justice.

The Long Shadow of Little Rock is a powerful and moving memoir that tells the story of the Little Rock Nine. It is a story that should be read by everyone who is interested in American history, and it is a story that will continue to inspire people for generations to come.

The Long Shadow of Little Rock is a must-read for anyone who is interested in American history, the Civil Rights Movement, or the power of the human spirit. It is a story that will stay with you long after you finish reading it, and it is a story that will continue to inspire you for years to come.
