Shayla Lawson is a successful businesswoman, author, and motivational speaker. But her journey to success was not an easy one. She grew up in poverty and homelessness, and she faced discrimination from a young age. But she never gave up on her dreams, and she eventually overcame adversity to achieve great things.

Lawson was born in Los Angeles, California, in 1983. Her parents were both drug addicts, and she was raised by her grandmother. When Lawson was 10 years old, her grandmother died, and she was forced to live on the streets. She spent the next few years living in shelters and abandoned buildings.

Despite her circumstances, Lawson never gave up on her education. She attended school whenever she could, and she eventually earned her GED. After graduating from high school, Lawson enrolled in college. She worked hard and earned a degree in business administration.

After graduating from college, Lawson started her own business. She founded a company that provides training and consulting services to businesses on how to improve their diversity and inclusion practices. Lawson's company has been very successful, and she has become a sought-after speaker on the topics of diversity and inclusion.

In addition to her work as a businesswoman, Lawson is also an author and motivational speaker. She has written two books about her experiences of overcoming adversity, and she travels the country speaking to audiences about the importance of perseverance and determination.

Lawson's story is an inspiration to everyone who has ever faced adversity. She shows us that anything is possible if we never give up on our dreams. Her story is a reminder that we all have the potential to achieve great things, no matter what our circumstances.
